An exchange visitor physician was more than 2.5 times more likely to have trained in New York than any other state.